and October, 1991 to the Union Government for examining the possibility of establishing an Irrigation Development Bank at the National level so as to mobilise additional resources for the irrigation sector. Alternatively, it was proposed by the Government of Karnataka that they should be permitted to float irrigation bonds. For providing financial assistance for projects, the Central Government had examined the possibility of establishing an Irrigation Finance Corporation which was not agreed to by the Planning Commission. Alternatively, a proposal was mooted to provide outlays for special plan assistance to nationally important projects for expediting their completion. However, due to resource constraints, the Planning Commission could not accept the proposal and suggested that the issue of funding for the National Projects be first discussed with the States as the overall national kitty for irrigation sector is not going to change thereby.
